ABOUT US

We operate a 24/7 communication control room, fully equipped with electronic monitoring. We have two-way radio equipment linked to each security officer and supervisor, management and client support vehicle. The directors have background experience in the safety and security field, management skills and security qualifications, as required by Private Regulatory Authority (PSIRA) and we hold a Grade A PSIRA certificate.

South Africa with its high crime rate, has consumers constantly looking at ways to develop their security. Consumers in the country are more receptive to advanced technologies in security systems. Armrite Security products will reshape the dynamics of the South African Security systems and service market. As innovative technologies will lead to new market competition and probable redistribution of existing markets share.

'Changing technologies, consumer perspective, and integration of security systems along with changes in product development and procurement will greatly influence the South African security systems and services market.' End users realise it is more cost effective to purchase, install, and operate integrate and automated systems rather than incur recurring labour cost associated with manual observation.'
